Gromyko's Canceled Trip Indicates To U.S. That Chill Over Jet Will Last No public figure has spoken our

By Bernard Gwertzman New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The cancellation of Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's trip to New York has fortified the view of some officials in the Resgan administration that Soviet-American relations are now so frozen that they may not thaw until after next year's presi-

The aftermath of the shooting down of a Korean Air Lines Bocins 747, according to the officials, has now increased tensions between the two countries well beyond what a key State Department official anticipated earlier this month. That official, who had been pressing for broadening the contacts between Moscow and Washington, predicted at the time that the whole matter would "blow over" in a couple of

However, the official was unable to say whether the political fallout in Washington over the Soviet refusal to accept blame for the inci-dent, in which 269 people lost their lives, would only harden relations further. In Moscow, the authorities seem to have stepped up their anti-American attacks.

It is against this kind of heightened tension in relations that the cancellation of Mr. Gromyko's trip to New York to attend a United Nations General Assembly session has to be seen, according to the administration officials. Secretary of State George P. Shultz had what was described as a completely unproductive meeting with Mr. Gro-myko in Madrid 10 days ago, and the White House is planning to have Mr. Reagan use the Korean incident as a centerpiece of his address to the General Assembly

There was no thought in recent days, the officials said, to having Mr. Shultz sit down with Mr. Gromyko in New York for a serious discussion of any outstanding issues beyond the airliner incident. In fact, they added, no decision had been made in Washington on the value of bolding a session with Mr. Gromyko.

MOSCOW - The South Korean airliner shot down by the Soviet Union on Sept. 1 was intentionally delayed 40 minutes in leaving Alaska the night of Aug. 31 so that its intrusion over sensitive Soviet nuclear installations could be coordinated with the orbits of a U.S. spy satellite, an air marshal charged in Tuesday's edition of the Communist Party newspaper Pravda. The marshal of aviation, Pyotr Kirsanov, said the coordination was necessary for the satellite, identified as a Ferret-D, to monitor Soviet air defense reaction to the intrusion.

A Soviet fighter jet shot the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 carrying 269 people out of the sky over Sakhalin island in the Soviet Far East. A synopsis of the Kirsanov article for Pravda was released simultaneously by the official news agen-agency Novosti. The agencies said the Korean airliner was delayed 40 minutes at its Anchorage refueling stop so that the Ferret-D could track the liner's two-and-a-half-hour flight over sensitive Soviet ouclear missile installations and record the Soviet response. The operation was joined, Marshal Kirsanov asserted, by U.S. RC-135, Orioo and AWACS planes, the Navy frigate Badger Alcutian and Hawaiian islands, Ja-

Soviet Orders Scholars Home From U.S. Study

By John M. Goshko Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — Twenty So-viet scholars in the United States for a year of study have been ordered home by their government on the ground that anti-Soviet feeling caused by the shooting down of a South Korean jetliner could expose them to danger.

The scholars came under an exchange arrangement that has a similar number of U.S. academicians working in the Soviet Union. The abrupt recall is the first such incident in the 25 years that the two countries have conducted the exchanges. State Department officials said Friday that when they leave, there will be no Soviet citizens in the United States under long-term exchange agreements.

Nicaragua Reports Repulsing Rebels

MANAGUA (UPI) - Defense Minister Humberto Ortega Sazvedra says 2,000 U.S.-backed rebel fighters invaded Nicaragua along its northern border from havens in Honduras but fled "demoralized." Mr. Ortega, reviewing the military situation, said Sunday that Nicara-guan armed forces had repulsed the guerrilla incursion in heavy fighting that began three weeks ago.

In Washington, a State Department spokeswoman said that perm for representatives of the Nicaraguan Council of State to enter the United States for speaking engagements was "under serious consideration." Ojukwu Wins Nigerian Recount LAGOS (UPI) — An electoral court has overturned another key result in Nigeria's August elections and declared the former Biafran secessionist leader, Odumegwu Ojukwu, the victor in a Senate race.

Under the original results, Mr. Ojukwu, of President Shehu Shagan's ruling National Party of Nigeria, was defeated by Dr. Edwin Onwudiwe of the Nigerian People's Party in the Onitaha senatorial district. Judge F.G. Uyanna reversed the result during the weekend, throwing out some votes for both candidates. Many of the results in the voting were contested and electoral tribunals overturned the outcome of two gover-

Polish Food Prices to Rise 30%-40%

WARSAW (UPI) - A Communist Party leader Monday announced increases of 30 percent to 40 percent in food prices in Poland and a drop in the standard of living of about 4 percent.

The official, Manfred Gorywods, told a meeting of economic experts at the party's Central Committee headquarters that "at the beginn next year, we face the necessity of a change in the retail prices of food. It will affect living change the next year will affect living standards by some 4 percent." he said, according to the news agency, PAP. He said the increases, coming at the New Year, would average 30 percent to 40 percent.

Mr. Gorywoda said the Polish economy had picked up in the last eight months but added, "the situation remains very complicated." The news confirmed government hints in recent weeks that higher food prices would be implemented to combat the financial crisis.

Bush Lands Rights Record in Hungary

BUDAPEST (UPI) - Vice President George Bush, the most senior U.S. official ever to visit Hungary, praised the Soviet ally's human rights record and liberal economy Monday and declared that the United States vanted better relations with all Eastern bloc countries.

But Mr. Bush also emphasized that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, while seeking a "fair agreement" on arms control, would respond to Soviet threats to military stability in Europe.

Mr. Bush, who is on a 10-day, seven-nation tour of North Africa and Eastern and Central Europe, said that the United States was "heartened by Hungary's efforts to expand contact, to foster tolerance and to meet the commitments that bind both our countries" under the Helsinki agreement on human rights. Human rights and freedoms, he said, "have not represented a point of discord but have brought us closer together,"

ROME (Renters) - An Irishman elected to head the Dominican order on Sept. 2 was chosen only after Albert Nolan of South Africa had turned down the job to continue his work against apartheid, the Roman Catholic

The order said in a statement that the 134 Dominican provincial leaders, at the end of a five-day gathering here, had first voted by a substantial majority for Father Nolan, 49, head of the Dominicans in

But when he declined to accept his election, they chose Father Damian Aloysius Byrne, 54, of Ireland. The Dominicans said it was the first time an elected master had been allowed to turn down the post since Saint Dominic founded the order in 1216.

U.S. Calls Anti-Tank Arm Unreliable

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — A costly new system to help NATO pilots locate and destroy Soviet tanks at night or in bad weather is unreliable and vulnerable to countermeasures, a Pentagon report said

The report, by a committee of the Defense Science Board, which advises the secretary of defense, cast doubt on the effectiveness of the the Air Force is developing. Lantim's estimated cost has also nearly doubled in about a year from $1 billion to $1.8 billion.

Lantim would, in theory, allow pilots to overcome a Soviet advantage in tanks by unleashing ultra-accurate missiles, guided to the heat emitted by tanks and detected by infrared devices. But the report said the system's ability to distinguish tanks from other objects is poor. "The performance of the system, even at best, is likely to be fragile and susceptible to primitive countermeasures," it said. An official said this would include covering "hot spots" of tanks with canvas or branches.

The new leaders were elected about a week ago in guerrilla-controlled territory in El Salvador's Chalatenango province, the sources said. At the same time, the faction endorsed a policy statement favoring cooperation with other groups and the "wide participaof other Salvadoran social and political organizations in the insurgent movement.

If the accounts of the sources are correct, the Popular Liberation Forces has put behind it a tendency toward ideological dogma and aloofness. The shift, which has been developing for at least two years, has tended to reduce fricwith the rebel movement's other four military factions,

They noted that a more unified guerrilla movement is in a better position to negotiate with the Salvadoran government and with the United States. As the Popular Liberation Forces has been shifting its stance this year, the Farabundo Marti front has begun talks with both governments.

The selection of the new leadership and adoption of the new pobcy statement mean that "the line of Ana Maria has been consolidated," according to a senior movement leader.

The new leaders, Mr. González and Mr. Rodriguez, were identified as supporters of Miss Anaya Montes's positions. After the deaths in April, Mr. González and Mr. Rodrignez had been named provisionally to the top two positions.

The final selection of the two ended a period of uncertainty about the faction leadership that began with April's events. At that time Miss Anaya Montes was stabbed to death by a group alleg-edly led by Rogelio Bazzaglia, a guerrilla commander who was close to Mr. Carpio.

The Test of Words

The words have been very strong with which Americans — most recently and formally a unanimous House and Senate - have condemned the Kremin for shooting down the Korean airliner: for example, "criminal destruction," "cold-blooded barbarous attack." But no one thinks that words alone will make the Soviets do what most people believe they should do: apologize, offer restitution and review their border procedures. Certainly there is no doubt on this score among those few in Congress who wanted to go beyond words and use the common outrage to restructure Soviet-American relations as a whole.

Some people are doing something. NATO countries starting with Canada (but excluding France), acting in most cases under the prod of their airliner pilots, have cut air links with Moscow for brief periods. Since the Kremhn permits few of its citizens to fly abroad, the mmediate effect of the cutoff is mostly to inconvenience Western travelers. Still, there is a satisfying political and emotional fit between the offense and this particular response.

We mention the emotional factor because it is, we believe, central to Americans' judgment of the way other nations have reacted. Most Americans, it seems evident, do not really expect foreigners to put strong sanctions into place at a time when Washington continues to sell grain. They do expect, however, an appropriate measure of outrage and sympathy.

Most nations have met this test of resonance. Some have fallen short, India, practicing a brand of nonalignment indistinguishable from alliance with Moscow, deplored the loss of life but failed to criticize or even name the Soviet Union. In the key vote at the United Nations Security Council, China, Guyana and Nicaragua abstained on political grounds, which are not hard to figure out.

The abstention of Zimbabwe, a friendly non-communist country, was something else. The State Department expressed dismay at Zimbabwe's vote. In explaining it, President Robert Mugabe recalled his own dismay that the United States, alone, had vetoed a 1981 resolution condemning South Africa for a strike into Angola in which some 450 persons, more than half of them Angolan soldiers, were killed. Our point is not that vote-swapping goes on at the United Nations but that for each country certain issues become litmus tests of their friends' reliability. It is something for all nations to keep in mind.

The Drug Suppliers

Waging a determined battle against the drug trade on city streets is only a partial response to the urban heroin epidemic. Ultimately it is an international problem, since the drugs that blight American cities are important, if illicit, cash crops to foreign farmers. Yet too often drug enforcement remains on the back burners of foreign policy. An amendment approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would help force it to the front.

Under existing law the president retains the initiative to suspend aid to a country that becomes the American market's source of heroin, marijuana or cocaine. He also enjoys wide discretion to decide whether or not a country has complied with requests that it take meaningful action against its drug producers. An amendment to the Foreign Aid Act would strengthen Congress's authority to initiate a cutoff by empowering it to direct the president to end aid to such countries. The amendment would also stipulate that aid be reinstated only after the country had demonstrated satisfactory progress toward curtailing drug production. In addition it would require that the president inform Congress annually about the progress of each country's crackdown. Would such a bill restrict a president's flexibility to shape foreign policy? Perhaps, But at least for some countries it might work the other way -giving the president an excuse for standing firm on the drugs even as he becomes more accommodating on other matters.

in any case, any potential loss of flexibility seems heavily outweighed by the magnitude of the problem and the plain fact that the ravages of the drug trade in New York, Chicago or Washington simply cannot be effectively alleviated only by fighting it on city streets.

In the early 1970s the Nixon administration demonstrated that putting drugs high on the foreign policy agenda could have some effect. U.S. officials urged Turkey and France to develop far-reaching programs to combat the flow of heroin, and for a while the amount available in U.S. cities declined. High-level diplomacy also was instrumental in encourageing Mexico to curtail the opium crop.

The new measure might force more effective anti-drug action by Pakistan, which, with Afghanistan, is said to provide more than 85 percent of the heroin sold in New York City. Pakistani leaders claim they have little control over the northwest Khyber region, where most of the drugs intended for export are produced, But Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who visited Pakistan in the spring and toured the areas where the opium poppy flourishes, argues that Pakistan's rulers control what they want to control. A stern message from Congress on foreign aid might well give them greater reason to wipe out heroin production within their borders. The amendment would at least force the White House and Congress to subject Pakistan's efforts to greater scrutiny.

Other Opinion

Western Troops in Lebanon

The Lebanese government wants the four-nation peacekeeping force strengthened. It would perhaps be better to replace this force with one officially sponsored by the United Nations. This force could operate under the flag of the world body to at least remove the danger of military involvement by individual Western countries and keep the world's biggest troublemaker, the Soviet Union, out. - South China Morning Post (Hong Kong).

The United States [has] joined France and Britain in giving warning that it was prepared to launch air strikes and artillery attacks against Druze positions. Unless the Saudis can persuade Syria to hold their allies off from launching the final push into Beirut, Western guns seem likely to open up.

- The Economist (London).

Two simultaneous foreign civil wars may be at least one too many for France's increasingly overstretched military resources. Together with the forces dispatched last month to Chad, France now has more than 4,000 men involved in costly hostilities overseas - along with the aircraft carrier Foch stationed off Lebanon. "The Mitterrand foreign policy is ambitious and coherent," says former Socialist cabinet minister Jean-Pierre Cot in a recent article. "The problem lies in the magnitude of its military engagements." With no financial gains at stake in either Lebanon or Chad, the argument goes, France will find it increasingly difficult to keep its troops in both places.

KAL 007: Clear, Then Murky Every once in a while someone calls me with a really terrific story — a story so deserving of the seldom-heard cry, "Stop the presses," that that is precisely what I want to yell. Only I know better and so I check out the story. Almost always I find that things are not what they first seemed. Nothing mins a good story like thorough reporting. It is the same with the concept of evil, as in

"evil empire." President Reagan has used the trotted out again by others after the downing of the Korean airliner. But again thorough reporting reveals complications. What once looked so simple — a massacre in the skies now looks not quite so black and white. The essence of the charge remains, of course, and it is compounded by the way the Soviet Union lied. But after that, things get murky.

- Richard Cohen in The Washington Post.

Russia is now bent on a sustained Big Lie campaign to justify the shooting down of the South Korean airliner based on the proposition that the plane was on a spying mission on behalf of the CIA. The Russians take the long view that, even if initially one is forced on the defensive, by invention and lies one can scize the initiative and go on to the offensive. Moscow is concerned not just with what people think now but with what they may believe a year or two hence, after the Western ban on Aeroflot is lifted and forgotten. Already there are some signs the Russians are finding ready listeners. The Security Council's resolution condemning the shooting down — vetoed by Russia — found China, Zimbabwe, Guyana and Nicaragua abstaining, the attitude being, "a plague on both houses." In the face of the Russian campaign the West will have to be persistent. Unless it is, the legend will grow that an American spy plane, unforgivably occupied by passengers, met its fate, and so our grandchildren will believe.

The Third World Crisis: Backward Toward Chaos

WASHINGTON — The world is on the verge of human catastrophe and political disaster. While attention is riveted on whether the debt crisis in the Third World will weaken or seriously harm the banking struc-ture in the West, developing countries are being put through an economic wringer that is undoing the achievements of several decades. Countries that achieved independence in the early 1960s and began modernization in the early 1970s are now being demodernized. Investment projects lie idle, children are not being taught, disease is spreading, beggars are filling streets from which they have been absent for decades, people are looting food shops, and the middle class is being destroyed by the table to the middle class is being destroyed. by bankruptcy and high interest rates.

Increasingly, the economic strains that Third World governments experience are proving too great for political structures. We seem to be entering a period like the 1930s, when economic distress triggered revo-Intions from Vietnam to Nicaragua. If the economic crisis is not solved we face political upheavals that can pose grave dangers.

Perhaps we no longer fear the nexus be-tween economic crisis and political change because in recent years the industrialized North has shown remarkable political stability in the face of economic adversity. Governments have fallen in every major industrial-ized democracy in the last few years, but, unlike the 1930s, there has been no major challenge to the system itself.

This stability, however, may be a tribute to the safety net of the welfare state that even developed countries are finding very expensive to maintain. Most developing countries anger of disadvantaged populations.

There is good reason why these populations should be angry. In the last 30 years, local governments, aid donors and international organizations have uprooted traditional ways of life and urged Third World people to pursue the path of "economic progress." Pushed by economic conditions from the farms and villages and lured into the cities as development economists emphasized industrialization over agriculture, these people turned cities like Jakarta, Mexico City and Lagos into wretched megalopolises.

In only 30 years, for example, the population of the Lagos area has risen from 100,000 to 1.5 million, and by some estimates to 3 million. It is as if all the pain and misery that people in the West experienced in more than 100 years of movement from country to city were compressed into three decades.

After years of effort, Third World people were beginning to make the adjustment from one way of life to the other, only to be told now that mistakes were made, the future is no longer bright and they should return to a way of life they have abandoned. But the agricul-tural skills have been lost; the land has been taken; the family unit is no longer organized to sustain the previous existence.

Even without taking China into account, the last count of the International Labor Organization put the number of unemployed have no such net. They are faced with the anger of disadvantaged populations.

There is good reason why these populations been increasing faster than in the developed countries and may now be around 40 percent.

Although the modest recovery in the developed North will have some positive effect on the developing countries export markets, overall the situation looks bleak. Receipts from commodity exports have dropped per-haps 25 percent in the last two years; and even with an upturn in North America, Europe and Japan, the outlook for many com-modities is not bright. Aid is not growing to compensate for that.

Whole continents have seen their hopes for the future disappear. According to the World Bank's 1981 report on Africa, the net flow of outside aid will have to double by 1990 if average per capita incomes are to stop eroding and start to rise again significantly. But if the established patterns continue, Africa's overall per capita growth rate will be zero or negative, and there are alarming possibilities for even steeper downward spirals in some countries as populations continue to grow.

To maintain their growth, developing countries need a regular flow of commerci loans and government grants from abroad. Yet, according to Morgan Guaranty, if the 20-percent increase in net new bank lending to Third World countries that occurred in 1981 did not take place in subsequent years, the developing countries would lose about $50 billion in investment funds from abroad. The consequence would be a drop of three percentage points in their real growth rate. Growth in Latin American countries perhaps would decline by more than 5 percent. That is only a prediction, but, regrettably, reality seems to be supporting it. In the first quarter of 1983, private bank lending to the developing countries dropped to almost nothing. The effects on the Third World of these reversals are extraordinary. Real income for the average person has declined for three years in a row. Sacrifices that the industrialzed world has not experienced since World War II are imposed on helpless populations.

In Chile, the IMF demands a 50 percent cut in government spending, even though Chile's unemployment rate has risen from 4 to 26 percent in two years. In Argentina, the government, following IMF guidelines, is trying to cut its budget deficit by an astonishing two-thirds, even though the unemployment rate has tripled in the last two years.

It is no coincidence that there have been large street demonstrations in both countries in recent weeks. The military governments in Santiago and Buenos Aires are in difficulty, with pressure for political change coming even from their supporters.

"Cuts in public spending" is a cuphemism for saying that health, education and welfare budgets are being slashed. (Countries everywhere are reluctant to cut defense budgets.) The IMF-imposed austerity measures that lead to improved balance of payments results today will lead to higher rates of infant mortality, illiteracy and malnutrition tomorrow.

Military Medicine for Central America We do not seek a military stalemate. We seek victory for the forces of democracy." NEW YORK — Now we know. By its own declaration, the Resgan administration seeks "military victory" rather than a negotiated settlement in El Salvador. And it aims to prevent consolidation" of a Sandinist regime in Nicaragua.

If arming and training insurgents to make war on the Sandinists fails to prevent consolidation," Washington believes a "partition" of Central troops permanently stationed there, as in Korea and Germany. "Let me make this clear to von Undersecretary of Defense Fred C.

Ikle told the Baltimore Council on Foreign Affairs last week. "We do not seek a military defeat for our friends. We do not seek a military stalemate. We seek victory for the forces of democracy."

Just three days before Mr. Ikle de-livered this calculated administration policy statement, Arthur Allen, the able young bureau chief for The Associated Press in El Salvador, was driven out of that country by those very "forces of democracy."

Mr. Allen had incurred the ire of the Treasury Police, a dangerous thing to do in El Salvador, he left after the United States Embassy told him that it did not have the influence or power to assure his safety against the "forces of democracy" — even though the story that caused the trou-

Arturo Rivera y Damas said in an emotional homily that 29 Salvadorans had been murdered by paramilitary death squads in the previous week. Whether those squads are se-cretly part of the "forces of democracy or are privately supported is in dispute in El Salvador; but "our friends" there are doing little or nothing to put an end to them or their bloody work.

Anti-Communist Army took credit for three bombings, one at the Uni-versity of Central America, and for two men found strangled and shot: The group's leaflets were inscribed "for peace and democracy" and dethe true patriots" were on those who called for "dialogue" with anti-government guerrillas. summer hill that many mistook for government success.

The constitutional debate in the National Assembly drags on incon-clusively. Troop morale is said to be low after a long summer in the field. And talk of a coup is being heard again in the capital, probably more from frustration than intent.

So if "military victory" is the goal, rather than negotiations and "dialogue," Mr. Ikle and his colleagues have a long and costly way to go in El Salvador. As for Nicaragua, to "pre-vent consolidation" of the Sandinist regime obviously requires that it be overthrown, a goal the Reagan ad-ministration now seeks through armheir bloody work ing and training an insurgent army

If thwarted in that objective, it threatens to "partition" a region of five countries that it does not own, and to impose its own forces to defend this new "front line of the East-West conflict."

That is a classic example of the historic U.S. attitude that Central America is "our backyard," a region where North Americans are entitled warlike speeches, because they don't to assert their perceived interests and regard Ronald Reagan as a warlike never mind those of the peoples involved. It is a typical express of the geopolitical view that Central America — or Africa or Southeast Asia - is a pawn in an "East-West conflict" and has no important problems or interests of its own. It was just such attitudes, acquiesced in by Central American governments installed or supported by the United States, that resulted in the insurgency in El Salvador and gave the Sandinists their chance in Nicaragna. And these attitudes still largely preclude sensible policies of socioeconomic development that might be far more effective than the belligerent quest for "military victory."

When Local Commanders Are Loose in Lebanon

By James Reston

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's latest problem is that while he is the commander in chief of the armed forces as specified in the and pilots at the site.

Constitution, he is not the chief commander on Capitol Hill. His troops Russians have told so many lies that are neither in nor out of the civil wars in Lebanon and Central America. and he cannot be sure how long he can keep them in or when the Congress will order them out, It is an awkward constitutional tussle between a president who can make war and a Congress that has sole responsibility to declare war. At this delicate point in U.S.-Sovict relations after the Korean plane isaster, while he is trying to get out of trouble in Lebanon and Central America and negotiating nuclear arms control in Geneva, it must seem to Mr. Reagan an odd time for Con-gress to challenge his authority and engage him in a divisive constitution-al debate, important as it is. In the confusion between the president and Congress over war powers, it has scarcely been noted that in the chaotic military situation in Lebanon President Reagan has in a way delegated his authority not to the Congress but to the local marine comnanders around Beirut Having ordered the marines into the Beirut battle zone, where they are taking casualties, he has instructed them to call for the guns and bombers on the U.S. warships offshore to knock out their attackers when in their judgment this is necessary without checking with military and political superiors in Washington Even in these days of instant worldwide communication between the Pentagon and field commanders, it is easy to understand why this step was taken. The president may be out horseback riding — as he was when the news of the Korean plane tragedy came in — and the local commanders have to defend their men. But if authority to shoot in a local crisis is left to "local commanders" operating under standing orders and the emotions of the moment, strange things may happen.

According to the Soviet version of the Korean plane catastrophe, this is precisely what happened in that event. On Sept. 9 the chief of the Soviet general staff, Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, announced that the deci-sion to shoot down the South Korean plane was taken by a "local commander" and that it was "not an accident or an error" - just, he suggested, authorized action by officers This may or may not be true - the

we can't be sure - but it is plausible enough to question the wisdom of leaving local military crises, which can become more dangerous regional or world crises, to local commanders. For example, the marines in Bei-rut, who are being attacked by Druze,

PLO and Syrian weapons supplied by the Soviet Union, can now call in under presidential authority U.S. guns and warships offshore. No doubt they could knock out the attacking batteries. However, as the attackers are within range of the U.S. warships close to the Beirut shore, so are the U.S. warships in range of Syrian missiles. This may be a crazy and scary scenario, but that is precisely the problem. The marines are in a crazy situation. The fights in Lebanon are so ancient and so vicious that anything could happen. The warring factions have so many modern weapons under their control, if that is the right word, that nobody knows what they might do with them, even against the U.S. warships within their range, So it is not only the constitutional conflict between the president and Congress that is worrying people in Washington. That is what they are arguing about, but, more important. they are troubled about what the administration is doing with all these men, ships and planes off Beirut and the Central American shores. And they are questioning in Congress not only whether the president has the constitutional right to do what he is doing, but mainly whether he knows what he is doing.

Oddly, members of Congress do not seem to be concerned about his man. It is all so theatrical and political - ordering the fleet into artillery range in defense of the marines in Beirut, and authorizing those ma-rines, if they are in trouble, to call in the guns and the bombers.

Congress is aware that it is dangerous to question the authority of the commander in chief, but it wonders about all the times this commander in chief has marched up the hill and down the hill and in and out; and, while it admires the marines, it questions whether it is wise to leave artillery decisions to "local commanders" without knowing more about their objectives and military orders.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

After a Batista a Castro Ten years ago the United States

helped to engineer the end of the democratically elected, if misguided, Salvador Allende of Chile, who was replaced, to Washington's undisguised satisfaction, by General Augusto Pinochet, one of the world's most brutal dictators since Hitler. During that same period we have lent our total support to Ferdinand Marcos in the Philippines.

Both tyrants are today on the brink of well-deserved overthrow. When they go, they will probably be replaced by repressive military juntas, or by equally repressive Sandinist-style communist governments profit-ing from their peoples' hatred of the United States. When will we learn the lesson that when you support a Batista, you eventually get a Castro?

I happened to be in Colombo during the first week of the anti-Tamil riots in Sri Lanka. Ton little attention has been paid to the civil rights record of the Sri Lankan government. The actions of army units in the Jaffna district, under stringent martial law since the shooting of a soldier on March 18, were largely responsi-ble for the chain of events leading to the July upheaval. After the shooting, army units ran amok in the neighbor-hood, plundering houses and raping women. The government tactily admitted the atrocity when it disbanded one of the army units involved.

Further violence against Tamil civilians followed the killing of two air force men several weeks later, and a mysterious campaign of violence against the Tamil population of the strategic northeastern port city of Trincomalee began. The situation was brought to a climax by the ambush of an army patrol by so-called Eclam Tigers, allegedly in revenge for yet another incident of mass rape by Sinhalese soldiers.

As the situation developed into a nationwide crisis, security forces were involved in the two most flagrant atrocities of the period, the shooting of 20 Tamils pulled off a bus in Jaffna in retaliation for the 13 soldiers killed in the ambush, and the slaughter of 52 Tamil prisoners in Welikada Prison in Colombo. An editorial (IHT, Aug. 9) referred to the riots as "commonal clashes"; in reality the disturbances were more in the nature of a pogrom, involving for the most part the selective burn-ing of Tamil houses and businesses.

The army response, during the time I was in Colombo, was to stand by and watch the ineffectual attempts the police to control the situation. The reaction of the government was a stunned, disorganized silence for four days after the start of the turnoil.

On July 28, President Jayewardene finally spoke to the nation, in a speech notable for its failure to chas-tise the Sinhalese mobs or express sympathy for the tens of thousands of ims. The thrust of the speech was that the entire crisis was the result of provocation by Tamil separatists and parties of the opposition coalition, nany of which are now banned. I witnessed the effect of this speech the next day on my way to the airport; the situation, which had begun to calm down the day before, had deteriorated again. Troops patrolled Colombo itself, but on the outskirts buildings burned and panicky motorists tried to avoid gangs of thugs who stopped outbound traffic in search of escaping Tamils. Vehicles that would not stop were attacked. Tamils have been officially discriminated against in Sri Lanka for decades. Their once disproportionate influence in government, military and academic posts has been greatly reduced. Now their commercial dommance has been damaged, if not destroyed. After the recent violence, it scems safe to assume that many more of them will believe the separatists, who say that Tamils will be safe only when they have a state of their own.

> CARLTON L. AMES. New York

It is not only the Tamils who are in trouble. Moslems, Christians, Malays and other minority communities are having problems with the Sinhalese. The Sinhalese Buddhists want Sri Lanka for themselves.

Bitterness of Lebanon's Table Talk

Christians Pessimistic After Shock of 'Defeat in Mountains'

By E.J. Dionne Jr.

New York Times Service JNIEH, Lebanon - The three men gathered on the patio of the Lagon Yacht Club were the picture of prosperity and contentment.

But the talk at this table in the heart of the Lebanese Christian stronghold north of Beirut was not of boating or stock prices. The three men spoke instead of the possibility of losing the good life in Lebanon.

The Christians are very pessimistic," said one man, who asked to be identified only by his first name, Joseph. "Many of them are trying to go away, to friends in the United States, to France. It's the shock from the defeat in the moun-

The defeat in the mountains" means the victory of Syrian-sup-ported Druze militia fighters over the Christian Lebanese forces in the war in the Chul mountains, fighting that began when Israel withdrew its troops to southern Lebanon earlier this month.

In the Christian areas such as this one, that defeat has led many Christian Maronites - who are generally well-off economically and have had the upper hand in political life as well - to worry about how long they can maintain their hold.

Even Christians who take issue with the politics and tactics of the Lehanese Forces see their defeat in successor was elected and a new the mountains as a sign of weakness in the Christian system of self-One such possibility, they said, would be an agreement in either the defense. These worries have been aggravated by a series of reports of negotiations on medium-range massacres of Christians by Druze missiles or the strategic-arms refighters - reports that are as diffiduction talks. The fact that these groups are so powerful in the Christian community is the result of years of work by Pierre Gemayel, the founder of the Phalange, and his son Bashir, who was leader of the Lebanese Forces until he was elected president last year, only to be assassinated before taking office. Through tactics seen variously as brilliant, ruthless or both, the father and the son made their organizations virtually the only game in town in Christian

Among those the Christians blame for their difficulties are Israel and the United States - Israel for pulling ont of the Chuf moun-tains, the United States for failing to give sufficient support to the Maronite cause. It is a sign of the difficult situation Washington finds itself in: The United States is viewed as an opponent by many Druzes and Moslems, and as not enough of a friend by the Chris-

Not all Christians here are Maronite: There are hundreds of thousands of Greek and Armenian Christians, and many of them have put some distance between themselves and politics as preached by Pierre and Bashir Gemayel.

Amin Gemayel, who was elected to the presidency after his brother's death, had always eschewed the politics in which Pierre and Bashir Gemayel excelled. Since taking office, he has appeared to take a more conciliatory line toward the Druze community.

their kidneys, and Dr. Jacobs said he would charge $2,000 to $5,000 for his services. The total price for acquiring the organ would be paid by the person needing the kidney. Dr. Jacobs said preliminary research showed that potential donors ask up to $10,000 for a kidney. "It will be pure, free choice on their part," Dr. Jacobs said of the donors. There will be proper, written informed consent. Since many can't read, it will be tape-record-

Many overseas donors would be flown to the U.S. by Dr. Jacobs to have the kidneys removed at U.S.

Giving up a kidney, unlike other organs, does not seriously affect the health of a donor. The remaining kidney enlarges to provide the donor with about 70 percent of original kidney function.

Some U.S. health professionals active in transplant activities say they had feared the creation of such a venture and supported a bill introduced in August by Representa-tive Albert A. Gore Jr., Democrat of Tennessee, to prohibit the sale of uman organs.

Selling human organs raises ethical questions, they argue, including possibly making transplant operations accessible only to those who can pay and relying for organs on poor donors, many of whom may be in poor health.

"This is an immensely damaging development," said Dr. Harold Meryman, director of a Red Cross laboratory in Bethesda, Maryland, and past president of the American Association of Tissue Banks.

"Putting organs on a market basis is abhorrent to our system of values," said Mr. Gore. "It seems to be something inconsistent with our view of humanity... Prostitution is illegal for reasons that are similar. So is slavery.

Mr. Gore said he plans hearings on the issue in October. Two other congressional committees are studying organ transplantation.

The National Kidney Founda-tion, which was approached by Dr. Jacobs for its approval, did not "endorse or support" the program, according to Tony Englert, president of the Washington office.

Dr. Jacobs said he got the idea for his network while watching

THE WORLD'S BEST SELLING ELECTRONIC TYPEWRITER NOW HAS A COMPETITOR. ANOTHER OLIVETTI.

The record for world sales in electronic typewriters is held by Olivetti. But from now on these products will have to reckon with a new idea in electronic typing, the doing away with the last remaining mechanical parts - a totally electronic typewriter - resulting in the ET 111 and the ET 115. On the other hand, the choice of an electronic typewriter could hardly be outside of the Olivetti range. In 1978, the world's first electronic typewriter was born of Olivetti technology. Today, Olivetti produces the world's most complete range.

Like all the other Olivetti electronic typewriters, the ET 111 and the ET 115 can grow to keep abreast of change and individual office needs, thus protecting your investment. Incidentally, these highly professional typewriters sell at an extremely competitive price.

So far Olivetti has sold some 1,000,000 electronic typewriters. It's out to break its record with the ET 111 and ET 115.

ARTS/LEISURE

Mickey Is Mighty Tokyo Mouse

By Clyde Haberman

New York Times Service U RAYASU, Japan — There may be no kimonos, but there are plenty of T-shirts with messages in English. Raw fish is scarce, but not pizza or fried chicken or other exotics. The twang of the shamisen is not to be heard, but the lines form at the right, folks, for the Dixieland band. Even the fellows in the chipmunk costumes do not bow, but hold out their paws to shake children's hands.

In short, there is not much recognizable of Japan, let alone Tokyo, at Tokyo Disneyland in this suburb six miles east of the Imperial Palace, Few Japanese seem to mind.

After a rocky start five months ago, the first Disneyland park built ontside the United States may become as big a success as its big brothers in California and Florida. Sponsors are already talking about adding new rides and building botels and perhaps even a golf course for links-crazy Japanese, who can be seen any day practicing their swings with imaginary irons on subway platforms.

So far, an estimated 5 million people have entered what the Disney people like to call the Magic Kingdom, and 5 million more are expected by the first anniversary next April 15. "We're doing fine," said James Cora, who oversees the operations here for Walt Disney

No one is really surprised that Disneyland is making it here. Some 200,000 Japanese a year visit the California park, and Mickey Mouse is such an omnipresent figure, from bath towels to sweatshirts, that he is probably more recognizable to many Japanese than the emperor. Cinderella's castle has even served as a model for so-called love hotels that couples go to for the privacy they cannot get in their crowded homes.

Disney Productions does not own the Tokyo park, but it is a nottoo-silent partner. The park and its 201 acres are owned by a company called Oriental Land, itself owned by Japan's largest property con-cern, the Mitsui Real Estate Development Co., and the Keisei Electric Obviously, the Disney name is the one that everybody cares about, and for its expertise Disney Productions receives 10 of every 100 yen spent on admission and rides, plus 5 percent of the drink, food and souvenir sales. And while Cora emphasizes the importance of decision by consensus in this country, they make it clear that if they don't like the way Goofy is walking, they can stop him.

"We advise," Cora said, "on how way of doing things."

That means that anyone who has been to the U.S. parks will notice little difference here. Also, anyone looking for a stereotypically quaint Eastern version — perhaps a gei-sha-like Snow White — is sure to be disappointed. This park is more resolutely American than a backyard picnic, down to the Stars and Stripes on some flagpoles.

As in the U.S. Disney emporia, the 6,500 mostly young employees are so clean that they practically squeak. English, by far, is the domi nant language. One can find Japa-nese signs, of course, but they are usually placed below the ones in English and sometimes they are not there at all.

This was how Oriental Land wished it to be, Cora insisted.

"The Japanese, right off the bat, wanted it to be an American experience. They wanted American food and no Japanese food. I resist-ed them on this, but they said, No. the Japanese know American food and like it." One can get sushi at the Crystal Palace restaurant and something called a "Japanese combination platter" at the Center Street Coffee House, but that's it for Japanese food, Japanese are accustomed to bringing along box lunches - obento - on outings, but these are not allowed inside the main park and must be eaten at small picnic areas near the front

This obento restriction set off newspaper criticism a few months ago, and some Tokyo residents considered the policy absurd. "My friend was quite unhappy," Kiyoko Shimizu, a 20-year-old student. said, adding, "He's an American."

But most of the complainers have been newspaper writers and Americans who think that Japanese should be eating Japanese food. No one visiting the park seems to mind much - except for the prices, perhaps.

Japanese tastes do differ on certain matters, however. According to Cora, visitors to Tokyo Disney land "run to the identifiable Disney characters right away," more so than Americans do. The lines stretch long - an hour or more in places - for Dumbo the Flying Elephant and Peter Pau's Flight, but are less conspicuous at theater attractions such as the Eternal Sea.

Also, the Japanese are inveterate souvenir buyers. Tokyo Disneyland has more square footage devoted to souvenirs than the two U.S. parks, yet it is still not enough. The shops are jammed, with people poking the merchandise and one another in search of a stuffed Mickey Mouse, say, or a T-shirt or a key pictures.

chain. "As soon as things slow down we're going to enlarge them,"

Cora said. At first, things were not so encouraging for the Disney people. Reservations were originally required, for crowd control, but they proved unnecessary. Early summer was colder and wetter than normal, and the pre-opening estimate of 50,000 visitors a day dwindled to a bleak reality of 27,000.

But school ended in familiar mid-July heat and hazy sunshine. With youngsters free at midweek and their parents taking time off in August, attendance reached and even surpassed its expected peak. Several days, people without reservations had to be turned away for n hour or two.

The record turnout, 94,378, came on a hot and clear Aug, 13. That is well above the high of 82,516 of Aug. 16, 1969, at the California Disneyland but still far from the 123,000 at Florida's Disney World last Dec. 28.

The apparent success has created troubles for the more established Tokyo amusement parks. Knowledgeable people say business is down 10 to 30 percent at some of electronic cash registers in Urayası, all is not necessarily rosy for Oriental Land. It spent $650 million to build the park — $520 million of it borrowed, with an annual interest payment totaling $45 million. The company is reluctant to discuss its finances, but apparently to reduce its debt it is trying to sell a 58-acre lot next to Disney land to hotel developers.

For the tourist, though, such concerns are far removed from the biggest worries, which tend to center on how to keep going when the line is coiling endlessly outside the Hannted Mansion. And for Cora, the real test will come in winter. when Tokyo gets cold and damp.

Weather is always a problem here, even when it isn't. When a typhoon appeared to be bearing down on Tokyo a few weeks ago, Disneyland got ready. "We taped all the windows and sandbagged the building so water wouldn't seep under the doors," Cora said. Then the center of the storm skipped by harely noticed. "It took four or five hours just to unbatten the hatches. We opened up late that day."

More parking spaces might be needed in the future, and, it appears, more hamburgers, Oh yes, and more film. That is cotype that is undeniably valid. Whether posing in front of Cinderella's Castle or borrowing an American's two children for a few moments for that extra Yankee touch, the Japanese do take a lot of

But for all the blipping of the Puttin' on the Berlin

By Jon Pareles

New York Times Service DEW YORK — Irving Berlin is back in the pop top 10.

"Puttin" on the Ritz," which Berlin wrote for the 1930 musical of the same title, has become an international best seller all over again.

The film featured Harry Richman and Joan Bennett, but the song later became associated with Fred Astaire. It has been remade by Taco, a Dutch singer and arranger working in West Germany. Taco's version includes a synthesizer backup, a deadpan vocal and a tap-dancing break and also tosses in a few bars of two other Berlin songs, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "There's No Business

Although Berlin, 95 years old, wrote most of his songs before the rock era, some have still shown up on the pop charts. "Puttin' on the Ritz" is Berlin's first new top-10 hit since Eddie Fisher's "Count Your Blessings," which went to No. 5 in 1954. Bing Crosby's "White Christmas," a pop-chart perennial that was originally released in 1942, reached the top 10 in 1955, and made its final return to the top 40 in 1962. war in Vietnam.

LOS ANGELES — Five movies dealing with sensitive political and social issues will reach U.S. movie theaters this fall, all in an eight-week period. The release of such a cluster of films is considered noteworthy by the film industry because in the last six years only about a half-dozen Hollywood movies have addressed such highly charged issues.

Two of the five are critical of American by practices. The third is pro-Sandinista, the fourth leans to the Palestinian side, and the fifth - the only one with appeal to conservatives - treats anti-nuclear protesters as Soviet dupes.

No one in the industry is prepared to say if five such films make a trend, but the box-office results of these movies will be watched closely by movie executives. The most controversial of the five is likely to be

Orion's "Under Fire," starring Nick Nolte and Gene Hackman as journalists covering the civil war in Nicaragua that ended in the overthrow of the government of General Anastasio Somoza Debayle in 1979. The film explicitly takes the side of the victorious Sandinistas and may be the only American movie in recent decades to side with a foreign government against which the United States has waged a political and Universal's "Hanna K." a French-produced, English-language drama directed by Costa-Gavras, the director of "Missing" and "Z," asks whether Palestinians can get justice from the Israelis and answers negatively. It drew mixed reviews at the Venice film

Warner Brothers' "Deal of the Century," starring Chevy Chase as an arms merchant selling American weapons to underdeveloped countries, is a black com-edy. It is described by its producer, Bud Yorkin, as "a 'Dr. Strangelove' about the arms industry and a reasonably strong statement on the insanity of the arms race. We depict arms shows where bazookas and antitank gums are sold like refrigerators or television sets."

A fourth new movie with political overtones is ABC. Films' "Silkwood," which stars Meryl Streep as Karen Silkwood, a laboratory technician and union activist. who died under mysterious circumstances after charging that she had evidence that phitonium fuel rods manufactured by a Kerr-McGee Corp. nuclear processing plant in Oklahoma were defective.

At the opposite end of the political spectrum from those four movies is "The Final Option," an English movie based on the 1980 siege of the Iranian Embassy in London by terrorists. "The Final Option" stars Judy Davis, the Australian actress who appeared in "My Brilliant Career." It is basically a thriller, but it has changed the facts of the event to make its terrorists not a group protesting the treatment of the Arab minority in Iran but a band opposed to nuclear weapons that is manipulated by the Soviet Union.

Frank Yablans, vice chairman of MGM-UA, the studio releasing "The Final Option," said that former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., and a member of the studio's board of directors, had arranged screenings of the movie in Washington but had no part in the decision to release the film this fall. The film has won praise from such political conservatives as Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger and

Senator Paul Laxalt, Republican of Nevada. Euan Lloyd, the producer of The Final Option, said: "Twe been irritated by a strong presence within the film colony of films with an anti-Establishment message. In 'WarGames,' the general is made to look a bloody idiot. I'd like to make films as politically strong as 1 can - not as Commie-bashing but to counteract movies like 'The China Syndrome,' 'Missing' and

It is not that Hollywood is afraid of controversy. ar Pushing He What Hollywood is afraid of is controversy that doesn't make money. The right controversy has often made money —including, in recent years, "The China Syndrome," the film with Jane Fonds and Jack Lemmon about the alleged lack of safety in nuclear power plants, and "The Deer Hunter," Michael Cimmo's film with Robert De Niro and Meryl Streep about the

"We believe that if you can find a movie that makes a statement and is entertaining, a film that's a little deeper than frivolous, it's an asset," said Michael Eisner, president of Paramount Pictures. "The managers of movie companies don't sit around saying, 'How do I feel about El Salvador?' They respond to a director who wants to make a particular film. If we feel that particular film is wise financially, we'll do it."

Daniel Melnick, the former head of production at Columbia Pictures who developed "The China Syndrome," took a different view. He said: "The movie came out of my concern about the dangers of nuclear energy as an everyday part of our lives, about the belief that nuclear power was a panacea. The fact that the movie coincided with the political convictions of its producer, Michael Douglas, and myself didn't make me forget my obligation to make The China Syndrome' exciting melodrama rather than a

Eisner and Chasman are agreed that, in Eisner's words, "If 'Under Fire' is a smash hit, everybody will be doing political movies."

Hollywood has, at various times, emphasized movies with political and social messages. During the 1930s the slogan of Warner Brothers was "combining good citizenship with good picture making." From "a Was a Fugitive From a Chain Gang' in 1933 to "Mission to Moscow" in 1943, Warners handled many topical news stories, sometimes advertised as 'Tom From Today's Headlines." During the 1940s, 20th Century-Fox also made movies with social themes, including "Pinky" (1949) and "Gentleman's Agreement" (1947), which were, respectively, relatively daring exposes of racism and anti-Semitism.

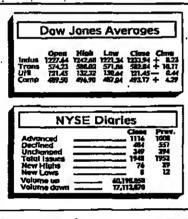

After the success of "Easy Rider" in 1969, movies about socially alienated youth flooded theaters. However, those movies - such films as The Strawberry Statement' and 'The Magic Garden of Stanley Sweetheart' - were not intended as political ferment," recalled Chasman, now an independent pro-"They were simply the equivalent of bikini movies, made by a panic-stricken set of studio managers who were doing what they thought teen-agers

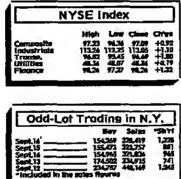

The minority of serious movies deal not with society, but with psychological inner space — a father becoming a mother to his son in "Kramer vs. Krathe Academy Award-winning best picture of 1979, or a damaged family groping toward healing itself in "Ordinary People," winner of the Academy Award in 1980.

A flurry of movies attempting to explore the Vietnam War—including "Coming Home," "Apocalypse Now," and the Academy Award winner for 1978, "The Deer Hunter" - were made years after the war was

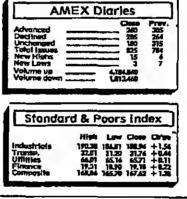

There have been exceptions. In 1971, "FTA," Jane Fonda's filmed record of live performances that she and Donald Sutherland gave at Army bases, argued the futility of the Victnam War. In 1979, "The China Syndrome" reached theaters a few weeks before an eccident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania became a subject of national debate.

NatWest Gives New Look to Bank in U.S.

By Robert A. Bennett

New York Times Service NEW YORK - For many years, the National Bank of North America was a some-what scruffy amalgamation of small Long Island and garment-center banks, the result of almost two dozen mergers.

It lacked a unified strategy, its senior offi-cers ran independent fieldoms, and its pay-scales were significantly below industry levels. Rather than being run as a bank, it was operated as an offshoot of CIT Financial Corp., a finance company that bought the bank in 1966.

Still, in 1974, it carned a record $25 mil-

One year later things started to turn sour. Bad loans and earlier poor investment strategies caused profits to phummet to $14 million in 1975, and to $10.2 million in 1976.

"We hit our peak earnings in 1974 and from then on it went the other way," acknowledged John Vogel, its former chairman and chief executive officer.

But the outlook changed again in 1979, when the bank was sold to Britain's secondlargest and highly profitable National West-minster Bank for $429 million. Suddenly, the New York bank had a source of badly needed capital, technological know-how and access to NatWest's experience, gained in running a network of 3,200 branches throughout Brit-

Today, as a result of the takeover, National Bank of North America bears little resemblance to what it was four years ago. Eleven of its 14 senior officers in 1979 have either left the bank or have been demoted; it is about to move into a slick new building in Wall Street's posh South Street Scaport area, and in this year's first half, its earnings were almost double what they were in the same period the year before. At the end of this month, it is to be rechristened National Westminster Bank USA.

becoming a growing concern, as the pace of such takeovers continues to accelerate. In the last year, for example, it was announced that Japan's Mitsubishi Bank is buy-ing Bank of California; that Puji Bank, also of Japan, is buying J. Walter Heller & Co., the big Chicago-based financial concern, and that a foreign bank, believed to be Bank of Montreal, is negotiating to buy Harris Bank-corp, Chicago's third-largest bank.

NatWest, which had a highly conservative reputation at home and abroad, was not expected to produce such a remarkable makeover at NBNA. Although one of the world's 10 biggest banks, Nat West was one of the last to expand aggressively internationally. "What makes NatWest different from other foreign banks is that it has tried to do something with its American acquisition, said Lawrence W. Cohn, first vice president and senior banking analyst for Dean Witter.

"Most foreign banks don't want to go through the agony of such changes, bot NatWest paid a lot of money for NBNA and we don't know how much pressure London is exerting for a better return."

NatWest appears to be enjoying its new role, even flainting it. It has spent $125 million, almost a third of what it paid to acquire NBNA, to buy its new building. Housing Starts In U.S. Reach 4½-Year High

WASHINGTON - The pace of new U.S. housing construction soared 8.4 percent in August to the highest level in more than 41/2 years, or an annual rate of 1.94 million units, the Commerce Department reported Monday. The report eased concern that continuing high mort-gage interest rates were taking the edge off the housing boom.

Starts of single-family houses jumped 10.8 percent in August to an annual rate of 1.14 million units a year, up from the revised 1.79 million of the previous month, after declining 9.1 percent in July. Over-all housing starts were running 85 percent ahead of the rate a year

The report revised July's figures to show a 2.8-percent gain for hous-ing starts instead of the previously reported 0.6-percent decime. The rate of construction for new single-family houses was 74.4 per-cent ahead of that in August 1982. Starts on apartments, condomni-ums and other buildings with five or more units rose 6.3 percent to a rate of 662,000 units after rising 28.2 percent in July.

In what is usually taken as a sign of construction activity down the road, the report said permits for building fell 6.5 percent, after rising for four consecutive mooths the only sign that builders that

Revival of East Bloc Exports to Repay Debts Seems Unlikely

By John Tagliabue
New York Times Service

VIENNA - Eastern European nations, badly in need of export revenue to repay their $73.5 billion debt, are losing the battle for mar-kets in industrialized Western nations to aggressive competitors from the developing nations of Asia and Latin America, according to experts attending a conference here on East-West economic ties. The participants agreed that only a revival of exports to Western countries could earn the Eastern bloc the hard, or convertible, cur-rency it needs to repay even part of its debt. And the consensus was that prospects for such growth re-mained gloomy.

Anxiety Hits Hong Kong Dollar Again

HONG KONG - Jitters over talks this week on Hong Kong's future pushed the colony's dollar down Monday to another record low of 8,195 to the U.S. dollar, more than 16 cents off Saturday's close, though rumors of a rise in interest rates helped the currency rally. Sources said intervention by the colony's banks of issue, Hong-kong & Shanghai and Chartered Bank, kept the unit from sliding further. Diplomatic sources in Reijing said they did oot expect any majo breakthrough at the two-day talks starting Thursday in Beijing. An atmosphere of growing acrimony has built up since the last round ended Aug. 3 and the Hong Kong dollar has lost 11 percent of its value against the U.S. dollar. China has vowed to recover Hong Kong when Britain's lease on the colony expires in 1997. Hong Kong's deputy secretary for monetary affairs, Tony Latter, said Monday that the government was deeply concerned about the currency's rapid decline, but he de-lended Financial Secretary John Bremridge's decision to retain the withholding tax on Hong Kong dollar deposits. Many traders attributed the unit's slide to that decision and to the Hong Kong Association of Banks' refusal Saturday to raise interest rates. The currency recovered partially Monday on news that the association would hold a special meeting, but at the meeting the association again decided to leave the rates unchanged. The prime rate was last raised Sept. 9, to 13 percent from 11.5 percent.

Also Monday, the Hang Seng stock market index ended at a nine-month low of 842.25, down 73.86 points, the sharpest single-day fall so far this year. Brokers blamed a late wave of overseas despite the partial recovery of the Hong Kong

Hungary Raises Basic Food Prices

BUDAPEST - The government introduced sharp rises in prices for basic foods Monday after acknowl-edging that Hungarian agriculture and industry had failed to meet their 1983 production targets.

The price increases - sugar by 23 percent, bread by 16 percent, edible oil and margarine by 10 percent - reflected the impact of the global recession on one of Eastern Europe's most open economies, Western economists said.

"He expected customers to have much more allegiance to their its own people, Thomas P. Frost, to banks. He also thought senior executives would be much more part of > Mr. Sturges said Mr. Knowles was who the bank needed. "Bill wanted people who have a broad view of American banking. The former executives had been with the bank so long they had a narrow outlook."

The men chosen to replace the former managers have been drawn from across the oation and from NatWest:

The sole survivor among the executive vice presidents who are not approaching retirement is George H. Denniston Jr., now in charge of credit administration. He joined NBNA in 1975 and was put in charge of the national division. Some of the changes undertaken at NBNA are beginning to show up in profits. In 1983's first half, the bank carned $19.5 million, almost as much as it did in all of 1982. If that pace is maintained for the rest of the year, the bank will carn a record $39 million this year. But NBNA's performance is still below that of other large banks. In 1983's first half, it earned only 37 cents on each $100 of total assets, compared with an average of 58 cents for the 15 largest U.S. banks.

Some analysts believe that because of NBNA's foreign ownership, Mr. Knowles' job is more dif-ficult than it would be if the bank were run by domestic investors.

International Banking: Emerging markets. Expanding technologies. Development on a global scale. The rhythms of commerce are worldwide. And Chemical sets a rapid new tempo.

We're proud of the traditions that have put Chemical at the forefront of international business. And prouder still of the innovations that keep us there. Our ChemLink "BankLink" network is the largest balance reporting and cash management system in the world. And we've just added a new ChemLink/Cedel module for Eurobond information and transactions.

We don't stop at being first—or best. We constantly advance the quality of our worldwide services. Look into the matchless performance of our Energy and Minerals Group, Foreign Exchange Advisory Service, Chernco International Leasing, International Investment Services, or any of our wide-ranging capabilities. Our new ideas mean new opportunities for you.

What Chemical has done yesterday, what we're doing today and what we're working on for tornorrow are all part of the tradition of giving you the very best banking service. It's a tradition that improves with innovation.

THE COMPROMISE By Sergei Dovlatov. Translated by Anne Frydman. 148 pp. $11.95. Knopf, 201 East 50th St.

New York, N.Y. 10022. Reviewed by Walter Goodman

SOVIET journalism is the subject of this sadiy funny novel by Sergei Dovlatov, who worked as a newspaperman in the Soviet Union before emigrating to the United States in 1979. It is a one-joke book, 11 variations on the contrast between life as it is lived in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the government's presentation of it. The narrator, also named Doviatov, looks over his clippings - "Ten years of lies and dissembling" - and remembers how the stories were concocted: "It's a hard road from the reported facts to the truth.

The book consists of flashbacks. One of the assignments given to Doviatov, a talented hack plying his trade in Estonia, is to celebrate the birth of the 400,000th inhabitant of the capital city, Tallian, on the eve of the anniversary of its liberation by the Russian Army in World War II. "No damaged goods," the editor warms. Unfortunately, the first baby Dovlatov comes up with turns out to have an Ethiopian father, who will not do even though he is a good Marxist. The father of a second baby is a Jew. Finally, Dovlatov gets an authentic Russian baby by bribing its non-black, non-lew-ish, thoroughly alcoholic father named Kuzin. "Too bad for the kids," Kuzin laments damply. "The kids aren't to blame. I call them Flowers of Life. Shall we have another?" Out of his mandlin musings, Dovlatov must make a happy story.

Alcohol plays as big a part in this novel as it reportedly (not in Pravda) does in Soviet life. "Once you're drunk," Dovision observes, "the whole day is free." The humor is gray, the color of cheap wodks. The prose, in the translation by Anne Frydman, is heavy with resignation. And the reader may find his smiles fading even as they appear: The open editorial competi-tion is still on," the editor reminds Dovlatov. The best articles will win cash prizes. And the winner will be sent to East Germany." Dovlatov replies, "Voluntarily?"

Most of the subjects for articles in Estonia's foremost paper — the 11th child of A Hero Mother of the Republic; the State Actomobile Inspection Unit - would be enough to make most reporters reach for the bottle. A search for someone to fill the requirements of a radio series entitled, "A Meeting With an Interesting Person," turns up an attractive young cancer researcher who seems perfect, except that can-cer is not deemed an upbeat subject. As the editor explains. "It engenders negative emo-tions. It calls up associations with a certain notorious banned novel." The longest tale brings Dovlatov and his favorite photographer, Zhbankov, to a collective farm, whose slogan is "Bone is a Valuable Industrial Raw Material," to celebrate the accomplishment of a record-breaking dairymaid. named Linda Peips. The editor is not certain 5; whether this Peips produced 200 liters of sulfactor 2,000, but he assures Doylatov, it was "at." lot," How did she accomplish such a feat?, she is asked. She replies, "The Communist Parry and its Leum Central Committee."

Doviatov and Zhbankov, who are about as, much at home on a dairy farm as Ben Hecht would have been, find themselves being enter-tained at a Soviet version of a Playboy Club by a couple of young women who bring a touch of spontaneity and affection into their excrutiatngly boring assignment and their irrevocably, compromised careers. "If only there were no party headquarters, no milk-crazed cow." muses. Doviatov, "if only I could live here without any serious assignments." But by now he cannot respond even to the inviting Evi, "all pink, in a wet bathing suit."

Dishonesty is the theme here. Former fascists transform themselves into steadfast Communists. Loyal Russians wind up in the Gulag. The journalists who cannot pretend to themselves that they are honest reach for the bottle:
("Don't think," Zhbankov advises in a depressed moment that seems certain to last forever, "Drink vodka.") Or they simply give up. "You know," says Dovlatov, "in our cirmstances it may just be more fitting to lose than to win."

The race began at 2 P.M., nearly two hours late, because of a 130degree shift in the wind. A light northerly breeze died out and a seven-knot southwesterly breeze

The race committee of the New York Yacht Club, which runs the races and selected the defender, then had to reset the starting line and the Coast Guard had to shift the 1,000 or so spectator craft gathered behind the line to new post-

Liberty's problems began right from the start. Australia II, skippered by John Bertrand, was to leeward and slightly ahead of Liberty as both boats approached the line on starboard tack. Liberty then tacked onto port to secure the preferred right side of the starting line

The yachts first crossed tacks 25 minutes into the race and Australia Il clearly led by several lengths. Australia II tacked up the left side while Liberty, driven by Dennis Conner, helmsman of the 1980 cup defender, stayed to the right. Liberty started a series of short tacks and Austraia II covered them and kept carving out a bigger lead.

Liberty's only gain came on the reaching legs. On the second leg she gained 20 seconds, and on the third, 10 seconds. But on the next leg, upwind, Australia II climbed out to a margin of 1 minute 15 seconds at the fourth mark. makes this the most lopsided victory of a challenger over a defender since competitors started racing boat-for-boat rather than on handicap. The biggest margin until now was the 2-minutes-9-second victory of Britain's Endeavor over Rainbow in the 1934 series.

How Athletes Play With One Good Eye

By Ellen Isaacs New York Times Service

N EW YORK — Never mind the arbletic ability it takes to catch a pass in professional football Consider instead just the perceptual-motor task involved. Each time a receiver makes a play, he must judge where the ball will land while both he and the ball are in motion, and he must continue to monitor his position and the changing location of the ball as the two converge on the same spot on the field.

Wesley Walker, a New York Jets wide receiver, did this successfully 55 times for eight touchdowns and 934 yards over the shortened 1982 regular season, plus the playoffs. And this seasons he's off and catching passes again, completing his perceptualmotor tasks with success that is endable for any receiver, but more so in his case, since Walker is virtually blind in one

Walker's vision in his left eye is 5-200, which means people with normal vision see at 200 feet what he can see at five feet. Although his field of vision is limited on his left side, forcing him to rotate farther than usual when catching a pass on that side, he says he has no trouble judging the depth, po-sition and velocity of the ball.

"Everything you'd think he shouldn't be able to do, he fools yon and does," Dr. B. Devid Gorman, the ophthalmologist at the Institute for Sports Medicine who examined Walker's eyes, said. The environment does supply many monocular depth cues, those that a single eye can perceive. These are the cues artists use to create the illusion of depth on a two-dimensional canvas. They range from the simple fact that closer objects overlap farther ones, to the subtle bluish tint in the coloring of distant objects. Also, the parallel lines of streets, hallways and, in football, the lines on the field, converge as they stretch toward the horizon, pro-viding another monocular cue. Traditional theories have held that the most significant reason the brain perceives depth, even though the image on the retina is flat, is that the two eyes are later-

Recent research, however, is showing that the visual system in the relative speeds of the right also has a mechanism sensitive to motion, through which a single eye can allow depth judgments as fine as those based on stereopsis. These results help explain the common observation that people who lose the use of one eye can

Dr. David M. Regan, professor of physiology and ophthalmology at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia, has been study-ing athletes and pilots with vision in only one eye, comparing their shillty to judge depth with that of people with stereopsis. He said there are two particularly robust cues to motion and depth. The first, called stereomotion, is related to stereopsis and requires visual information from two eyes. When their displaced images are fused, the brain can determine the speed of an object by processing the change in the disparity between the two images of an object as it moves closer or farther away. The other cue, the one Walker and other so-called stereoblind people apparently use, is monocular, and is related to the size of an at Northwestern University, has image as it moves on the retina.

"As the ball gets closer it gets bigger," Regan said. "In the brain we have found nerve cells that very accurately respond to that changing size. They can compute were not aligned during the how rapidly it is moving and its cal period early in life. The speed of the ball is discerned by the rate at which the image grows on the retina, and its direction by the path of the image. The same one is also commonly used by those with normal vision, who use information ally displaced, and therefore see about the relative speeds and dislightly different images of the rections of the two retinal images.

This means that as long as an object or the body is moving, the visual system can make depth judgments, no matter how poor the vision in one eye.

Regan said the set of nerve cells sensitive to changing size operate independently from the other perceptual systems, which process sideways motion, position and a variety of other spatial informa-tion. Therefore, this system is not affected if other depth systems

The visual system is able to process the relative speeds of these images as they move across a single retina and can determine their distance relative to each other and to the body.

It is also possible, Blake said, that even people with poor acuity in one or both eyes may be able to perceive some stereoscopic depth, as long as they can fuse the two cyes' images. "The acuity measure is not very informative," he said. "It tells whether a person can see fine detail." But most of the visual forms, not small, detailed items. Blake's research is based on evidence that the brain has different channels of perve cells that process different ranges of detail, from large, vague shapes (called "low spatial frequency information") to fine lines and patterns ("high spatial frequency" detail).

People with low acuity may have impaired fine detail channels, but their low spatial frequency channels may still be intack. Therefore, the brain may receive two slightly displaced pactures of has ways to overcome larger forms from both eyes, fusare as yet inexplicable."

ing those images to create stereoscopic depth.

What emerges as one the most remarkable aspects of the visual system is the adaptability of the brain: its ability to modify its growth to overcome great depri-vation, especially if the nervous system is still young and plastic. "The most intriguing thing for me," said Dr. Gorman of the Institute for Sports Medicine, "is what this means for young people who have handicaps. The brain has ways to overcome them that 19,021-Mile Walk Ends After Almost 7 Years Almost seven years after he set out from the barren southern tip of South America, George Meegu has walked 19,021 miles to the oth er end of the Earth. The 30-year old Englishman completed his mar athon journey Sunday, planting the flags of 16 nations on the shore of the Arctic Ocean. "This walk is it celebration of freedom," Meegas said. "It was achieved withoufunds and without sponsorship. It was made possible by the 10,00n acts of kindness shown me by the people of this world," Meegan let Jan. 26, 1977 from Ushaia, the southernmost nonscientific settle ment on Earth. Meegan, a membe of the British merchant marine said he made the journey because nobody had ever done it. When h arrived at the the Beaufort Sea ii Canada — 2,426 days after leavin South America and after making an estimated 31 million strides be cried and said: "I feel like I" lost my best friend. It's over."

Adoring fans called out "Peter Peter," as the actor Peter Lawford escorted his daughter, Sydney, to her wedding, an event that drew a crowd of Kennedys and onlookers to Centerville, Massachusetts, "She's the bride, I'm not." Lawford, said as he shook hands with one fan. Sydney Lawford, 27, married Peter McKelvy, also 27, a free lance filmmaker and produces from Boston.

Anthony Blunt, the former royal art adviser exposed as a Soviet spy has left a valuable painting to Brit-ain in his will, the Sunday Tele-graph reported. The work is "Rebecca at the Well" by the French 17th-century artist, Nicolas Pous sin. Bhmt kept the painting, estimated to be worth as much at £500,000 (about $750,000), in his apartment after buying it for less than £500 pounds in 1935. Blunt was internationally recognized as the leading expert on Poussin and his advice continued to be sought after his humiliation in 1979, when he was named as a traitor by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and stripped of his knighthood. He died last March at age 75. The Sunday Telegraph said that publication of the will has been delayed while lawyers negotiate with the tax authori-ties and that the painting is being offered in lieu of inheritance taxes.
